Let Tommy Do It

Went to His Majesty's last evening. "Let Tommy Do It" . . . awfully good . . . and . . . funny.

Handy thing to have someone to do things for one . . . most useful . . . Saves so much worry . . . If they can be trusted. That's one thing about the FASHION-CRAFT SHOP. Whether it's choosin' a tie or a suit . . . if you can't make up your mind . . . just leave it to them . . . and . . . you'll always be right. Most helpful service . . . really. Oh! . . . that's the tip . . . "Let Tommy Do It." . . . Taa . . . Good mornin'.

PUCK CHASERS SHOW SIGNS OF SENIOR CLASS

Good Ice Helps To Speed Play.

PLENTY OF TALENT.

Form Displayed Makes Problem Of Choosing No Light One.

The senior hockey squad held a fast workout last night on an ideal sheet of ice. "Shag" divided the men into two teams, consisting of the following players: Timmins, Flanagan, Lyall, Peverley, Dineen, Russell, Plow, E. Anderson, Cully, "Boo" Anderson, Parsons and Clark.

"Flin" Flanagan's appearance on the ice came as a surprise to many. He showed up well at the start, but after a few rushes down the ice he was forced to go off. If "Flin" gets into condition he will be a valuable asset to the team.

"Ted" Clark is continuing to make good in the nets, and although Timmins is also putting up an excellent exhibition, it is a question who will represent McGill in the goal-minding position.

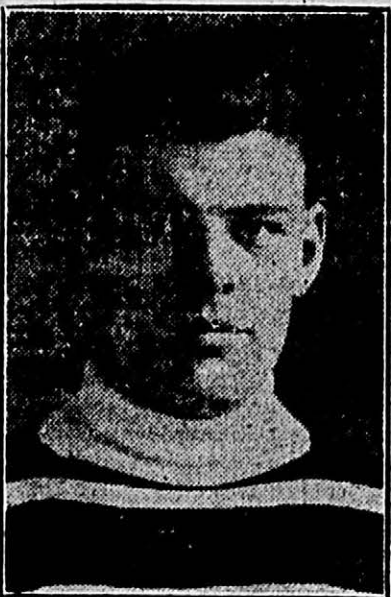

On the forward line, Russell, Parsons and "Boo" Anderson are playing good hockey. Plow, who started out with the intermediate squad, is also showing up well. He is a little light, but is fast and a good stick-handler.

Cully and Heney made a good team on the defence, and will likely be the two defence players that "Shag" will take away with him on the holiday trip.

The second squad held a hard practice between seven and eight. Instead of a game, the men practised shooting, and the forwards practised against a strong defence. Gilheoley, defence, and Glashin in goal, showed up very well, while Macintosh, Gordon and Turton work like clockwork as forwards. This trio got through the defence again and again by their clever passing and by spreading the defence out.

The men were constantly changed about. Kelly, Leash and Gilheoley alternating on the defence—Gordon, Turton, Macintosh and Fraser on the forwards. The intermediates play their first game against M.A.A.A. at the Victoria rink at three o'clock, December 27. Everybody out and give every team good support from the beginning to the end of the season.

GOOD AS EVER.

Jim Cully.

JUNIORS SHOULD HELP OUT ANNUAL

Some Men Are Delaying Work Of Board.

There still remain some men who have not had their photographs taken, and the work of the Annual Board is seriously delayed thereby. Special arrangements have been made with Notman's for sittings between the hours of 9.30 to 11 in the morning and 1 to 6 in the afternoon. Surely there will be some time during these two periods convenient to everybody. In any case, photographs will be refused except under very special circumstances unless they are in by the commencement of the second term.

The following are the men for whom these special sittings have been arranged:

ARTS.

Bullitt, Curtis, Ford, McCall, McKinnon, McMan, Phillips, J. Robinson, Roy, Richardson, Schleifstein, R. M. Smith.

MEDICINE.

Almond, Cassidy, Clemondson, Collins, Cooder, Crulshank, Daley, Dorrance, Elie, Fisher, Gross, Jande.

WHAT'S ON

TO-DAY.

1.15 p.m.—Senior Hockey practice.
2.00 to 4.00 p.m.—Gymnastic Club worry-out.

2.30—Second Hockey Squad practice.

3.00—Third Hockey Squad practice.

Coming.

Dec. 24—Western Supper and Theatre Party.

Dec. 27—Intermediates vs. M.A.A.A. Victoria rink, at 3 o'clock.

FENCERS HAD GOOD WORKOUT AS A WIND-UP

Everyone Out and Working Hard.

MEN ALL ENTHUSIASTIC

Individual Training Work To Be Done During the Holidays.

The fencers held a very beneficial practice yesterday afternoon. The men were in the dressing rooms at 5 p.m. sharp, and by 5.15 all were on the floor ready for work. Mr. Long is well satisfied with the progress they are making. He is very anxious that all men should be on time, as many new points are brought out at the beginning of every practice, and if the men are not there they will not get the explanation given.

Mr. Long began by showing the men what their work consisted of, and the men set to work to practise the different points carefully.

The men were requested to practise all that they had already learned during the Christmas holidays, both to keep themselves in shape and to keep the different parries fresh in their minds.

The next practice will be held on January 5th, at 5.30 p.m. It is very essential that all men turn out, as many new parries will be practised.

Any men who have previously done any fencing are earnestly requested to turn out and fit themselves for the assault which will take place in February.

It is now practically assured that McGill will be able to send her full delegation to the Convention at Des Moines. The old spirit is still potent.

WESTERNERS TO GET TOGETHER

Supper and Theatre Party To Be Held.

When?—Christmas Eve.
Where?—First, The Union.
Second, Princess Theatre.
Next, _____?
Who?—All Westerners.

A chance for men from the West who are unable to visit their homes at Christmas time to spend Christmas Eve in a real Western atmosphere is provided for next Wednesday. At a meeting of some of those interested, held yesterday, it was decided to have a supper at the Union at 6.30 p.m. on Wednesday, and to visit a theatre after the supper. All western men are asked to help make this a success, as plans for another and more interesting function, to be held later in the holidays, will be discussed at the supper. Will each man intending to be present sign his name to the list provided for that purpose in the Union, or phone one of the following members of the executive?

R. S. O'Meara—Monkland 1533.
D. M. Balzan—Uptown 290.
W. B. McKee—Uptown 290.
C. W. Austin—Uptown 7452.

STEADY GOING LAW TEAM WIN CHAMPIONSHIP

Stellar Exhibition In the Final.

AIRTIGHT PITCHING.

Series Has Been a Success From Beginning.

The final game for the class championship in indoor baseball took place last evening in the High School before a large and enthusiastic audience.

Rarely have two teams so evenly matched played together, and the experts who had doped it out that the game would go to the team that got the breaks, had their expectations realized.

The men of Second and Third Year Law, with their well-balanced team, strong defensively and terrific offensively, took first bats, with the obvious intention, as in their previous game with First Year Law, of demoralizing their opponents by piling up a huge score in the first inning. It did not take them long to find out they were up against sterner stuff in the aggregation of Second Year Science, and that if they were going to win the game they must play baseball every minute. By heroic efforts Law managed to score twice in the first inning and to hold Science scoreless. Four more runs were added by Law in the second. In their half of the second inning, Science, by determined batting and owing to a temporary ascension of the Law team, managed to score six runs and tie up the game.

Both teams then settled down to play baseball, and owing to the really fine pitching of Kearney and Wilson for Law and Science, respectively, and the fine fielding of both teams, runs were few and far between.

Then came the eighth inning. Law were leading 12-8. Science began a determined onslaught, and by determined hitting managed to even up the game once more, so that both teams entered the final inning with twelve runs each.

The spectators were on edge, as the first Law man stepped up to bat and banged out a safe hit. It was here the breaks of the game went in favor of the

ARTS SENIORS ARE TO BE SHOT SOON

Photographs Must Be Taken At Once.

It is necessary that the Arts Seniors should have their individual photographs taken as soon as possible. These will be taken during the Christmas holidays for the men who are in town at that time. Gowns will be supplied by the photographer for use in the photographs. The pictures will be taken at Notman's Studio, 471 Union Avenue.

The following men are expected to have their pictures taken before they return to college in January:

C. B. Smith, E. M. Greaves, R. D. Taylor, L. K. Friedman, N. E. Peterson, J. N. Petersen, H. A. Covelar, W. L. Duncan, S. Wiseman, H. Bunt, G. R. Caverhill, P. DiFlorio, G. F. Lalond, J. A. It will be necessary to pay the photographer the sum of one dollar at time of sitting to cover the costs of the photograph.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 20, 1919.

The "Daily" wishes to each of its readers a Merry Xmas and a Happy and Prosperous New Year.

The Christmas Spirit

To-day marks the close of the first term of the session. Within a few short hours after this leaves the press we will have pushed aside our task to join the family circle in celebration of the Yuletide.

Somehow or other Christmas is in the atmosphere. The frosty air, cheery brightness and happy bustling throngs all seem to contribute to the constitution of what we vaguely term the Christmas spirit. Not merely the child, whose implicit faith is pinned to a mythical Santa Claus and from whose glistening eyes expectancy beams, but even the most sophisticated of us are victims of the contagion. There is a tingle in the air. Something is in league with the persistent and hoary rascal Jack Frost to send the red blood coursing through our veins with unwanted rapidity. It is the Christmas season.

For many this holiday season represents the reallation of hopes long deferred. Places about the festive board which last year, the year before and the year before, were vacant, will once more have an occupant. The grim picture of battle-torn fields, muddy trenches and cold, wet khaki-clad figures, which has hung ponderously over the festive board for five years will now be in the distant background. All will be brightness and good cheer and Christmas bells will peal with a new tone "Peace on earth! Good will to men!"

Beneath our merry making, our pleasure and our good cheer there will be the true Christmas Spirit. The spirit of charity, unselfishness and good will towards men. For, after all, in this festive season we see only the superficialities—the pleasure and recreation—we have entirely missed the essence of the Christmas Spirit. As a result of the influence of the Yuletide 1919 we should be less selfish, more charitable and consequently worthier of the privileges we enjoy.

For you all we wish the best and brightest Christmas possible, and say with Tiny Tim "God bless us every one."

Christmas Giving

There isn't a day but someone raises the cry of the high cost of living, and there isn't a day but some complainant spends money recklessly. No matter what the number of sermons against extravagance most of those who preach and most of those who are preached to, go on trying to gratify every wish, regardless of expense.

This is the season of Christmas shopping, and while certainly we do not advocate the abolition of one of our most expressive customs, we do believe that there should be more discrimination exercised when gifts are purchased, and that there should be less money spent this year for the bizarre and useless.

During the Christmas season prices on everything that could possibly serve as a gift are raised, but the articles that are most attractive and purely ornamental are the ones that command the most exorbitant prices.

Give if you are able, but try this time to give wisely. There is one thing which we can all give, a gift that will appear seemly to the Christ in whose honor we celebrate our greatest festival, and that is the gift of a kind deed. A kind deed, a generous smile, a cheerful greeting should be appreciated more than a gift that is useless and criminally costly.—The Daily Texan.

QUIPS

UNCLE SALT BASIN — HOW IT IS DONE.

Oh, often when I try to write I feel as if there came a blight upon my blinking pen; I try to rhyme, but all in vain, there's not a thought inside my brain—ja know what I do then?

I fool around and stall and fill up space until—Great Scott! a subject seems to jump into my mind, and then, by gum, you ought to see the verses come. They roll out in a lump and all I need to do is keep on wringing till I fall asleep or till my readers do, and that just comes to much the same—so now you know my little game. I think it's fine, don't you?

TOUGH LUCK!

Algernon Percy Augustus Shadd, A poet was of note,
His luck was most distressing bad—
It got poor Percy's goat.

He went into the desert and
He watched the whitening east.
Alone he stood amid the sand
Unseen of man or beast.

He cried, "Aurora, thing of grace!
How glad are we earth-folk
That night can shatter thy fair face!"
—Just then the morning broke!!

PRIZE COMPETITION—REAL THIS!

McGill "Daily" is now offering a valuable prize to any student of the R.V.C., or female member of the Faculties of Law and Medicine, who is able to perceive the joke in the lime-rick printed below. The management and staff is willing to go bond to the amount of thirty-five (35) cents that there is a witticism concealed in the poem. The object of the competition is to ascertain whether or not the statement is true that women are unable to see a joke unless it is printed in heavy-face type and has quotation marks around it.

(We regard this, personally, as a misleading statement; in our humble opinion, the quotation marks are quite sufficient.)

Send in your solutions, then, fair readers. Remember if you hit on the right answer, there is no saying what the prize may be—no saying at all. It has been rumored that a prominent member of the "Daily" staff has come forward with an offer of a free course in penmanship to the successful competitor. Try your luck!

There once was a clever young grad,
Who remarked "I believe we've been bad,
When we get our degree,
For I now plainly see
That a B.A. is always in bad."

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Dear Iva:—

The other night I met three Meds coming from a function of some kind. One stood on his head on the sidewalk and clapped his feet together; the other two were trying to pick up the reflections of the stars in a frozen puddle and saying something about "Kimberley." Is this what they call a "stag" party?

THE

Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung (Semi-Off.), Nov. 8, comments on the serious shortage of coal in Austria, coupled with a severe winter. It points out that very little help is to be expected from the Allies.

The Arbeiter Zeitung (Vienna, S.D.), Nov. 1, says that German-Austria cannot live as an independent state, and that prohibition of its union with Germany is one of the articles in the Peace Treaty impossible to carry out. It urges that all members of Parliament should do their utmost to get this prohibition deleted.

The Berliner Tageblatt (Dem.), Nov. 13, also laments the prohibition of a union between Germany and German-Austria. It points out the impossibility of a Danubian Federation, owing to the antithesis between the Czechs and the German-Austrians. It condemns the Entente as "great in words and small in actions, promising much and performing little, powerful in threats and extortion and weak in assistance."

"What did people do before the age of the telephone?" queries an Eastern professor in Physics. "Well, for one thing, old dear, they enjoyed a quiet, undisturbed nap on Sunday afternoons."

CARTOONS CONTAIN CLEAR CARICATURE

L. J. Notkin, Med. '20, This Week's Winner—Many Cartoons Have Been Submitted.

This week's Cartoon Prize was won by L. J. Notkin, Med. '20. A. L. Perry, Arch. '23, also submitted a cartoon on the same subject, but, owing to the fact that it was contrary to the attitude of the "Daily," it was not considered advisable to print it. Both drawings were excellent, and it is hoped that the artists will continue to contribute after the "Daily" resumes publication.

The first week's prize was won by Baltzan, Med. '20, on the subject of the Med. Dinner, and last week's cartoon, "Si Whiffstree at the Dance," by Ross Wiggs, Arch. '22, was considered the best of several cartoons submitted. This contest will be held every week from now on, and the cartoons selected will be published in Saturday's "Daily" each week. Items of current interest to McGill should be chosen as subjects, and should be executed in India ink on white paper to facilitate reproduction. Very often a cartoon makes a point where print would fail, and it is to give prominence to this form of expression that the "Daily" is holding these contests.

Law team, and added by a great deal of luck, of which they took the utmost advantage, mixed in with some good hitting, they managed to put seven runs over the plate before the last man was put out.

Science made a determined effort to make up the lost ground, but after one man was gone and two on bases, a fast double play killed their chances, and for the first time in the history of the college, the Law/Faculty boast a championship team in some other line of sport beside the Mexican one of flinging the odd verbosity.

On the game to-night there was very little to choose between the two teams, luck proving to be the deciding factor.

The undoubted star of the game was Sigler, Law's third baseman, whose fielding approached very close to the miraculous, and if McGill enters a team in the City League, any man that can take his position away from him will have to go some.

Of the Law team, all played well, but mention must be made of the masterly performance of Kearney as pitcher. He certainly showed a lot of class, and was at his best in the pinches, his double play in the ninth inning showed him to be a real ball player of more than ordinary ability.

McGills at short-stop and Crankshaw at first base also played steady games in the field, while Crankshaw's batting and base-running proved to be very material factors in Law's victory. "Bunny" Foster, captain and second baseman, played in his usual brilliant form, and ran his team with the few cunning associated with those studying the profession of Law.

For Science, the outstanding stars were Wilson, their pitcher, and Root, short-stop. Wilson was especially good, and looks to be about the best pitcher yet seen in action. Root's batting was much in evidence in all of Science's rallies, as was that of Bissell, who also played a splendid game.

The series just ended has proved to be a most enjoyable one, and the quality of ball displayed augurs well for any team that may represent McGill in a City League. Too much credit cannot be given to our genial "Dad" Lamb,

"THE BROADSIDE"

McGill University Women's Union

The McGill University Women's Union arose from the need of the hour. It was organized at the beginning of the war, in the autumn of 1914. The suggestion came first from Mrs. Walter, who urged that the women connected with McGill University should band themselves together to help the McGill men who were going overseas to fight. The Union worked with vigor and success from its first days. Mrs. Walter was the president until, unfortunately, she had to resign from ill-health. Mrs. Howard became president, but was also obliged to resign. Mrs. Porter became president in 1915-1916, Mrs. J. W. Ross in 1917, and Mrs. Moyse in 1918.

As regards the habitation of the association, two rooms are connected in our minds with the activities: the first work was done in the pleasant room in Strathcona Hall, which for two winters was put at our disposal. The use of Strathcona Hall will always be connected in the memory of members with receptions given by the Union in the large hall to various McGill units before their departure overseas. In 1917 the Medical Faculty kindly gave us the spacious room in the new medical buildings. Larger quarters had become necessary owing to the increase in work, and above all, owing to the space and special conditions needed for the sphagnum dressings.

The making of the sphagnum dressings was undertaken upon the initiative of Professor Boushall Porter, and proved one of the most important parts of the association work. About 25,000 dressings were sent overseas, and the dressings made by the Union were used as a model for similar work all over Canada and in many places in the U.S.A.

In the early days personal parcels were sent to each McGill man going overseas, but as the number of men enlisting increased, this became impracticable, and each unit in which there were many McGill men was supplied with shirts, socks, scarves, caps, etc., as occasion required. Large parcels were sent to the 148th, the University Companies, the McGill Battery, the McGill Siege Draft, the 5th Ambulance and the McGill Tank Company, etc. When these units were at the front, weekly or fortnightly parcels were sent to them; besides this occasional parcels were dispatched to the McGill Hospital and several convalescent hospitals. To the Red Cross were sent pneumonia jackets, hospital sheets, etc. The report for the year 1916-17, which may be taken as typical, gave the output as 1218 pairs of socks, 110 mufflers, 223 caps, 176 flannel shirts, 890 pyjamas, 660 scarves, 500 pneumonia jackets, 178 pairs of wristlets, 100 housewives, 150 hospital shirts.

To buy materials and wool the Union raised during the years of the war $7460. This was done from the annual subscriptions of about 100 members who, on an average, constituted the association, by donations and by several entertainments. The first of these was due to Dr. Perrin, a concert given in December 1915 by the McGill Conservatorium Orchestra. The second concert given by the Union was honored by the patronage and presence of H.R.H. Princess Patricia. In 1917 Miss Ballon and Mr. Nolley gave a concert in the Ritz-Carlton, where the same year the Reverend Dr. Adams lectured for the association.

In the autumn of 1917 the corresponding secretary undertook, on behalf of the Union, to write to any McGill man whose name appeared in the lists as wounded or sick, and also to those who had received distinctions. An attempt was made to vary the letters as much as possible to each man, and the answers received will be archives precious always to the Union. The letters showed the truest appreciation of what the society had done in gifts or sympathy, and what is especially noticeable in these letters, often written in hospital beds or on active service, is the love and devotion of the boys for their Alma Mater, and the feeling that they were rewarded if they brought honors to Old McGill.

Naturally since the armistice the volume of work has declined, but much has been done and much is still needed for sick, often incurable cases, and for convalescent men. Sock-making—this continues and is needed for hospitals such as that at Ste. Agathe and Belmont Street Hospital.

The year 1918-19 shows a good record—this is up to middle of September, 1919:

Pairs of Socks	614
Shirts	29
Caps	86
Scarves	7
Pyjamas	6

Hospital Suits 7
Books 55
Sweater 1
There were sent to—
P.P.L.L. 106 pairs socks.
6th Field Ambulance, 125 pairs of socks, 24 shirts, 35 books.
No. 10 Siege Battery, 124 pairs socks and 1 shirt.
No. 7 Siege Battery, 99 pairs socks, 24 caps and 1 scarf.
No. 3 Canadian General Hospital, 90 pairs socks, 6 pyjama suits, 7 hospital suits, 4 shirts, 19 books, 1 scarf and 1 sweater.
McGill Tank Battalion, 18 pairs of socks.

Siberian Forces, 52 pairs of socks, 12 caps and 5 scarves.
France for the refugees—
86 packets of needles,
2 doz. hanks of linen thread,
12 doz. spools of thread,
10 gross of linen buttons,
1 1/2 doz. bachelor's buttons,
Box of assorted buttons,
152 yards of unbleached cotton,
Boxes of assorted tapes,
30 Dresses,
6 Night dresses,
6 Flannel jackets,
12 Pyjama suits,
2 1/2 doz. cards pearl buttons,
1120 yards white cotton,
42 pairs socks,
40 black pinafores,
14 Chemises,
4 Waists,
2 Pneumonia jackets,
58 pairs drawers.

There is still much to do, in days of peace as during the time of war, and the record of those four years makes us wish further life and activity for the Union. The members can now work for the general welfare of the students and for their entertainment.

There is University Extension work; through the settlement some of the benefits of the University may reach our poorer neighbors.

Finally the McGill Women's Union will hold together if only to work for what is very near to each heart—the McGill Memorial to those who fell in the war.

Respectfully submitted,
AMICE LEE,
Hon. Secretary.

IS EAST WEST?

The folly of the doctrinaires who figure out their problems in a kind of political vacuum is castigated by Professor Ramsay Muir, of the University of Manchester, in a lucid and deep-cutting article in The New Europe.

Referring to the demand for a form of self-government for India, partly met by the so-called Montagu-Chelmsford plan, now under consideration, Professor Muir declares that the question of how the political system and methods of the West can be made applicable to the needs of India is not merely one of political machinery. He suggests that an answer can be proposed only after it has been determined how far the dominant political concepts of the West, the basic ideas underlying mere external procedure and mechanism, are "in accord with the deep-rooted convictions and habits of thought in India."

The dominant conceptions of the West, Professor Muir proceeds, have been four. The first is "the idea of individuality as something supremely valuable, something possessing such an inherent sanctity and such inalienable rights that all formal restraints upon its self-expression not necessary for the safeguarding of other individuals must be jealously regarded."

The second basic idea of the West is the conception of the laws which hold society together not as something imposed by external authority, but as representing the will and conscience of the community and therefore changeable by common consent. The third dominating conception is that of the nation as the surest foundation of state organization.

The fourth idea is a resultant of the former three. It is the system of national self-government through representative assemblies.

This system absolutely presupposes the presence of the three preceding ideas; it would be degraded into a mere fiction in a society which does not recognize unit the individual with his vote as the foundation of the whole structure, which does not believe in law as the elastic expression of common will, and which is not united as a nation, "since only a body of men fundamentally homogeneous can be effectively represented."

Applying now these tests to India Professor Muir finds that "individuality does not command, and has never commanded, such respect in India as it does in the West." For the highest Indian ideal is self-suppression, as contrasted to Western self-expression. The doctrine of the fundamental equality of every individual, he points out, runs contrary to the very basis of Hindu society and religion, to the system of caste. Next, law in India is not considered as the expression of the common will; instead, it is externally superimposed by divine authority. In the case of Mahomedans it cannot be changed at all; in the case of Hindus it is a little more elastic, a certain latitude being allowed for interpretation. Third, the idea of the nation or nationality in the Western sense is altogether unknown in India; the unity which India possesses is of a wholly different kind; the system of caste and the cleavage between Mahomedanism and Hinduism make the crystallization of a common national consciousness in the Western sense impossible.

It is obvious that so great a counterbalance, if not allowed for, must vitiate the six-syllable conclusions of the technologists, even if they do live in Boston. Of course, it may be that they have not neglected this important factor in the general result; but no mention was made of it in the telegram announcing the remarkable discovery made by Professor Louis E. Dorr of the M. I. T.

PARTY STATEMENTS

THE PROGRESSIVE PARTY.

The caucus of the whips of the Progressive Party in the Union yesterday afternoon was attended by representatives from all the faculties. The whips for the various classes reported that the numbers who wished to join the party was only limited by the number of men in each class.

The policy of the party was fully discussed by all the men present, and everyone seemed to be pleased with the general outline of the party's programme for the session. It was decided, however, that no announcement of the party policy would be made until it was possible to give the full programme for the session, after the Christmas holidays, as it would not be fully prepared and revised for a few weeks at least.

The supporters of the party appreciate the fact that a sane progressive "Red" flag, already beginning, it would seem, to want "policies" not acceptable to all their members. We undertake to prophesy division in their midst when they have their "enormous" caucus in the "large auditorium."

On the other hand, the Constitutional Party has no boasts to make. We have stated our general views, "Government of the whole country by its democratically elected representatives, with no ultra vires legislation, unnecessarily infringing on private rights, to no benefit of the State." We do not shout of the support we are receiving. Let that show itself at the appointed time, which will be early in the coming session. Now we can only say that one trump follower, in favor of our policy, ready to think and speak for himself, is worth to us ten satellites gathered in by purely partisan or clique sympathies.

By a remarkable coincidence, in the same issue as the launching of the Mock Parliament, appears on page three an article clearly demonstrating the actions of the Radicals in the U.S.A., under the heading, "Police Unions, etc." Can the Progressive Party, rightly termed as having radical tendencies, disown such actions? As a valedictory message, we merely give best wishes for a Merry Xmas and Happy New Year to the supporters of all parties alike, and ask the solid men of the country to be ready with their enthusiastic support within the early days of the coming session.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL PARTY.

We note the customary radical efforts outlined by the Progressives in the "Daily" of yesterday's date. Instead of a few plain facts as to their policy, we see boastful verbiage of the support their party is receiving—support in favor of "progress." And what, may we ask, is "progress"? And who is not in favor of it? The mooted question is not the being in favor of it, but how the term is interpreted by its exponents. Instead of giving the public their views on this point, the Progressives hide behind excuses of the need of careful preparation of ideas. Here seems to underlie this excuse, the fact of lack of unity in their ranks. The medley of hangers-on who joined the Radicals at the last "Lit" meeting, on the cry of the "Red" flag, are already beginning, it would seem, to want "policies" not acceptable to all their members. We undertake to prophesy division in their midst when they have their "enormous" caucus in the "large auditorium."

On the other hand, the Constitutional Party has no boasts to make. We have stated our general views, "Government of the whole country by its democratically elected representatives, with no ultra vires legislation, unnecessarily infringing on private rights, to no benefit of the State." We do not shout of the support we are receiving. Let that show itself at the appointed time, which will be early in the coming session. Now we can only say that one trump follower, in favor of our policy, ready to think and speak for himself, is worth to us ten satellites gathered in by purely partisan or clique sympathies.

By a remarkable coincidence, in the same issue as the launching of the Mock Parliament, appears on page three an article clearly demonstrating the actions of the Radicals in the U.S.A., under the heading, "Police Unions, etc." Can the Progressive Party, rightly termed as having radical tendencies, disown such actions? As a valedictory message, we merely give best wishes for a Merry Xmas and Happy New Year to the supporters of all parties alike, and ask the solid men of the country to be ready with their enthusiastic support within the early days of the coming session.

DEMOCRACY IN MALTA.

So Malta, where the cats come from, is also to have a constitution. The only spot in the modern world where the ancient Phoenician language, the idiom of Tyre and Carthage, is still spoken by more or less pure-blooded descendants of the inventors of the alphabet, is to enjoy autonomy.

Passing from Carthaginian to Roman, and successively to Byzantine, Arab, Norman and Aragonian rule, this remarkable little people managed somehow to preserve their individuality, just as they did later under the long regime of the Knights of St. John, who occupied Malta on being driven by the Turks from Rhodes. During their reign occurred the outstanding event of Maltese history, the repulsion of the Turkish siege of 1565, which probably saved Italy, France and Spain from Ottoman invasion. The Knights succumbed, in 1798, to an expeditionary force dispatched by General Bonaparte, but French rule, with its doctrinaire tyranny, was detested by the natives, who in the next year welcomed the Brits as deliverers. The Treaty of Paris in 1814 confirmed Britain in the possession of Malta, and the island was soon converted into one of the most formidable naval fortresses of the world.

Demands for self-government have been raised by native leaders ever since the British occupation. British objections were tersely summed up by the admiral who said that it would be about as sensible to give a constitution to Malta as to a battleship. The political situation was complicated by the presence of a small group of Italian, or rather Italianized, intellectuals, who, although few in numbers, were strong enough to handicap the British administration. As a matter of fact, the population of Malta is Italian neither by race nor by language, although a knowledge of Italian is indispensable in commerce and is cultivated in native society as a polite accomplishment. Elementary education is conducted in the native Maltese idiom, while secondary training is Italian or English, according to the parents' option; and English is chosen by over four-fifths as being of greater practical significance.

A charter setting up a sort of representative government, granted in 1881, was rescinded in 1903. However, agitation for home rule increased constantly, until it now has achieved its goal. Details of the new Maltese constitution have not been forthcoming; but, assuming that the proceedings of the Diet will be conducted in the native idiom, this twentieth century world of ours will soon be enriched by a parliament in which refractory ministers will be thundered against in the language of Hamlet and Hamblin.

Trying to get into a happy state of mind on two per cent beer, is about as discouraging as trying to inflate a Zeppelin with a bicycle pump.

"RIGA" PURGATIVE WATER FOR CONSTIPATION

The famous "Keeley Institute" for the cure of inebriates is, it is announced, to pass into the limbo of forgotten things. The supply of patients has fallen off to such an extent as to make the business no longer profitable, it is said. The sanitarium undertook to give the victim of inebriety a permanent distaste for liquor, through what was called the "blebicide of gold" treatment. For one week the patient received, according to reports, all the liquor he could drink; then the "cure" began, and soon the patient grew to abhor the cup and remained sober "ever after."

"BLIND HUSBANDS"

HERE is a photodrama which is at once an absorbing love story—a gripping portrayal of human passions—a thrilling adventure picture—and a marvelous, glorious scenic—with a splendid surprise at the end that sends you away in a glow of happiness. To tell you one word of the plot would spoil the most tremendous hour of dramatic entertainment you've ever known. We'll simply say that as the action unfolds you will grow powerless to leave your seat. It will be as if you, yourself, were one of the actors. You will pass through their trials and temptations, make your great decision in the moment of crisis, reap what you have sown. And when all is over you will be uplifted as never before by any moving picture. On no account fail to see the wonderplay, "BLIND HUSBANDS." Now playing—the picture you'll never forget.

LOEW'S.

Special vaudeville and picture attractions will be offered at Loew's for Christmas week. The feature vaudeville offering will be a miniature musical comedy number called "Oh Auntie."

This is also a unique fashion revue with some beautiful models and gorgeous costumes. The comedy of the play is wholesome and of a refreshing variety, while the settings are elaborate and cleverly conceived. There are nine people in the cast.

Other acts will be Harold Lacoste and Alice Clifton in their own amusing little sketch, "Just Nan." Wells and Crest will have an amusing comedy and song number, while Holden and Harvon in "The Bill Poster" have a novel comedy offering in which some original song numbers are introduced. The Juggling De Lisle is a marvel of manipulation and promises to prove a popular number.

Billie Burke will be featured on the picture end of the bill in her latest and what some consider her best picture, "Sadie Love." The story deals with the flirtation of a newly married woman, who creates her own love triangle for the sheer love of intrigue and mischief. "The Back to Nature Girls" is the title of the comedy film, and Loew's British-Canadian News will also be on the bill.

THE PRINCESS.

Protean acts on the vaudeville stage have always drawn a large and appreciative audience, and in this connection the work of Owen McGiveney has won high reputation for that clever and versatile actor. Mr. McGiveney comes to the Princess theatre next week with a new act in which he plays a version of Dickens' immortal "Bill Sykes," enacting all six roles. He has made a specialty of Dickensian characters, and his latest portrayal of a Dickens play is highly praised. Each of the six roles he depicts is individual in costume and characterization, including that of Nancy, the poor girl who loves Sykes.

Howard Langford, a musical comedy star with a string of successes to his record, will appear with Miss Anna Fredericks in a song skit entitled "Shopping," which is based on the humors of the type known as professional shoppers in a "shopping bee."

May Wirth occupies an undisputed position as the greatest female circus rider on the stage. She comes of the famous Wirth family, who won their spurs in Australia, and who for years dominated the leading circus rings in the world. The Wirths in the Antipodes occupy the same position as P. T. Barnum did in America. Miss Wirth's riding act includes some of the most daring and graceful feats ever seen on horseback, and is full of thrills.

Klaiss and Saxe will be seen, in an act which entertains through songs, dancing and music, with plenty of comedy and individual solo work. It stands well in vaudeville ranks.

Kranz and La Salle, in "Songs and Foolishness," offer amusing songs and intersperse their act with humor of a distinctive brand.

William Sully, one of the famous family of the Four Sullys, will be associated with Genevieve Houghton in a merry musical (titled known as "Between Dances," specially written for them by Arvon Hoffman, who is one of the best-known producers of sure-fire hits in vaudeville.

"Musical Comedy Diversions" will be supplied by Foley and La Turc, and will be found to include some of the most popular and widely-known song hits in musical comedy records.

Another amusing act will be found in that contributed by Will Perry, the Human Frog, whose contortions are as amusing as they are astonishing.

The entire bill has been chosen to provide special entertainment for the youngsters for Christmas week, and will be found full of harmless fun and comedy that appeals to children in particular, while at the same time affording excellent entertainment for grown-ups.

THE ORPHEUM.

The delightful comedy, "Happiness," from the pen of J. Hartley Manners, has been chosen as the Christmas week bill for the Orpheum Players, and a more appropriate selection could hardly have been made, as the entire play radiates happiness and the joy that comes of giving pleasure and making other people's lives happy.

The story centers around two blase, world-weary people, and how they found happiness in doing things for others less fortunately situated than themselves. Mrs. Chrystal-Pole is a wealthy young widow, bored to death with doing nothing, satiated with pleasure. Philip Chandos is a wealthy young man in similar case, and imagining himself in love with Mrs. Chrystal-Pole. Into the latter's life comes Jenny, a little dressmaker's messenger, who, though poor, is compact of happiness and cheerfulness of disposition.

From her, Mrs. Chrystal-Pole begins to learn that there are things in life more worth while than self-seeking. She brings Jenny and her mother to live with her for a while, but the atmosphere does not suit Jenny, and they go back to their humble home. But meanwhile both the blase ones have grown to be very much interested in them, and while Philip seeks Jenny's runaway father, Mrs. Chrystal-Pole sets Jenny and her young man up in business.

Though the search for Jenny's father "A Lively Trio," in which Pressler, does not meet with the successful and

A SLIGHT MISTAKE.

An English regiment on its way to India stopped at Aden, but noting how arid the place looked, few went ashore. An officer observed an Irish sergeant of his company leaning over the ship's side, gazing intently at the town. "Well, Pat, and what do you think of Aden?" the officer inquired.

"Well, sorr," was the unexpected answer, "what Adam an' Ave Iver saw in such a place hates me."

The strike epidemic has attacked a home for the blind! A despatch says that inmates of the Pennsylvania Working Home for Blind Men presented a demand for higher wages to the management and threatened to strike. They make brooms, carpets and cane-seat chairs. Their demand came after they had joined the American Federation of Labor.

The printers' strike is responsible for some queer freaks of typography. A theatrical magazine, for instance, spelled the word, purgery "purgery" three times on one page. "The motives for purgery," it says, "are weak." "The preacherdom of purgery," it adds, "it would seem, might have purged his pages of these offenses, even though the printers could stomach them."

A freak of spelling not connected with the strike is noted by a current magazine as occurring in a book of "Poems from Shelley and Keats": "Alas! I have not hope nor health. Nor piece within nor calm around."

England is still the land of great wealth it appears from the columns of some of its advertising mediums. A recent issue of "Motor," of London, contains under the head of "Second-hand Cars for Sale," several offers of such cars for over ten thousand dollars each. One car, which dates as far back as 1913, is described thus: "Magnificent open sporting body, leather cover for hood, tapered bonnet, electric installation, Warland rims, 2 spares, 1 each side, very fast and in perfect condition throughout, price 3,000 guineas ($15,000!)."
